GLOCAL UNIVERSE FUND

FACTSHEET APRIL 2025

Macroeconomic Update

April brought flat performance for the fund's shares, while global markets experienced major volatility amidst rising US trade policy uncertainty. Recession and inflation concerns pushed on equity valuations and some credit yields. 62% of IG bonds ended higher, while 73% of HY bonds finished in the red.

The U.S. Treasury curve remained largely unchanged at the short and long ends over the month, while the 5–7-year segment saw a notable compression of 25–30 basis points. While mid April's major sell-off largely rebounded by the end of the month, uncertainty remains, which is reflected in strong performance of gold. Surprisingly BTC made a confident comeback.

The data, views and forecasts in this document is for information purposes only and shall not be regarded as an offer, solicitation or recommendation for an investment. Past performance is no guarantee of future results. All investments involve risks including the risk of possible loss of principal. The market value of a Fund's portfolio may decline as a result of a number of factors, including adverse economic and market conditions, prospects of securities in the portfolio, changing interest rates, and real or perceived adverse competitive industry conditions. The Fund invests in securities and other investments that may be illiquid, which hold the risk that the securities will not be able to be sold at the time desired by the Fund. The Armenian securities markets have substantially less trading volume than the securities markets of OECD countries. Additionally, the capitalization of the Armenian securities markets is highly concentrated. This combination of lower volume and greater concentration in the Armenian securities markets may create a risk of greater price volatility than in the securities markets of developed economies.
